

Summary Report

The chart below shows the scores attained for the five scales by Ms. Sample. When we observe her scores, we may predict what is most likely to be noticed in her daily activities – the higher the score the more intense the behavior. These scores suggest the following:

- Tending to be cautious, she waits for information and advice before implementing a plan of action.
- She typically places more emphasis on process and results than feelings when deciding on a course of action.
- Usually, she is capable of recognizing new opportunities, but she will be cautious about pursuing them.
- Sometimes, she encounters difficulty making decisions under pressure.

The chart shows the relative relationship of her scores on all five scales. For a more complete understanding of these results, please refer to her Management Report.
