David Lawy is a seasoned Technology Executive with over two decades of leadership experience across highly regulated industries. In his career, he has navigated complex technology landscapes, multiple M&A integrations, new product implementations, critical payment systems, as well as rigorous regulatory and security compliance requirements.

He believes that in today's world every company is driven by technology, shaping their success or limitations. Technology is no longer an optional extra to the business; rather, it is what is leading the business.

Today, David is a Managing Partner and CIO of QuantumSmart, a technology advisory firm that gives leaders holistic insight into their organisation - revealing how business strategy, technology, risk, data, processes, and people connect and impact one another.

QuantumSmart assesses organisations end-to-end, uncovering interdependencies, gaps, opportunities, and risks so leaders can make confident, informed decisions. From insight, comes action. The Future in Focus aligns strategy, technology, and innovation with teams, translating insight into actionable, right-sized solutions that drive growth, resilience, and lasting impact. From strategic roadmaps and AI strategy to quantum risk assessments and executive advisory, every engagement is tailored, practical, and built for execution.

David serves as an advisor, board member, and mentor to organisations ranging from startups to enterprise, contributes to the Gartner Research Board, and serves as an advisor to the Harvard Business Review.

When he is not working, he enjoys exploring watersports, learning about climate change, and spending time with his family.
